

Increasing Flu Vaccination: How Practice and Academia Can Help

November 30, 2022

Overview

Seasonal flu activity is high across the US. Getting vaccinated each year is the best way to reduce the risk of flu and its complications. During this meeting, Alicia Budd, MPH, Epidemiologist, and Erin Burns, MA, Associate Director for Communications, Influenza Division, National Center for Immunization and Respiratory Diseases, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, will share updates and discuss how public health practice and academia can help increase flu vaccination. The November 18, 2022 FluView: A Weekly Influenza Surveillance Report Prepared by the Influenza Division is included in the meeting materials for reference.
